The Mount Hood country is supplied with an abundance of irrigating water, for sale. If a creamery should locate here, Mr. Langille and his neighbors would at once secure fine blooded dairy cattle, and enter the business with a determination to make a success of it.

Some place near town would likely be the best location for the creamery. The two location for the creamery. The West Side farmers, whose lands lie above the ditch of the Farmers' Irrigation Co., have voted by a big majority to form an irrigation district, which will enable them to bond for the construction of an adequate system. The result proves conclusively that the farmers in the Barrett and Crapper districts want water and are determined to have it. The services of a competent engineer will now be secured to estimate the cost of construction, when bonds will be advertised for sale, and construction work begun as soon as possible.
